Great Britain's reply is not in the nature of a direct negative, though it is not unlikely it will have that effect. Mr. Tawney argued that more would be accomplished by allowing the ways and means committee to report on his resolution after due investigation of the law than by the adoption of a simple declaration now. Speaker Henderson pointed out that Mr. Richardson's resolution did not contain a single averment that there had been an actual assault on the rights of the House. and ruled that the resolution was not privileged. In doing so he called attention to the fact that under the threat of such invasion the House to-day had taken action to investigate the subject that it might be qualified and equipped with argument if the issue were presented later. Mr. Fitzgerald called up his resolution asking the secretary of the interior to transmit to the House all orders issued and regulations promulgated by him or any of his subordinates regarding the issuing or withholding of rations from Indians, together with reports and documents in his office relating thereto, and it was adopted. The resolution is designed to ascertain the truth of current reports issued by Commissioner Browning relative to Indian children who do not attend government schools. The House then passed, among a number of others, the following bills: For the relief of the surviving partners of Penny & Son (an Indian depredation claim); to pay the widow of the late Fish Commissioner McDonald $3,000 for the use of patents.
